BASIS

Residents and recovery residence/NARR members have the right to a recovery residence environment without fear of speaking out about their rights.

Every recovery residence/NARR member must provide all residents with a grievance form, along with written instructions on how to fill the form out, and where to send it.

A grievance must relate to the organization's mission statement, house rules, admission criteria, or the coalition/NARR bylaws.

PROCEDURE

When a resident has an issue, they must first take it up with the house manager, owner or owners of the organization for resolution. If a mutually agreeable resolution is not reached then a resident may file a written grievance with the coalition/NARR. The grievance must be specific in nature with all documentation attached.

Upon receiving a grievance, the Coalition/NARR will notify the Board. The President shall determine whether to call a special coalition meeting or wait until the next regular scheduled meeting.

If a special meeting is called, the Coalition President shall notify the Coalition members, contact person of the organization and the petitioner by mail of the date, time, and location of a meeting. Failure to appear for the meeting will be cause for dismissal, or expulsion from the coalition.

The petitioner shall have an opportunity to present the issue at hand, and must have proof. A representative of the organization will have an opportunity to offer the reasoning behind the action taken.

After hearing the facts behind the issue at hand the coalition will discuss in private to consider the merit of the grievance and may offer suggestions to the parties.
